A411. Dangers of Micro-Organism

Bacteria are organisms of minute living cells, with characteristic varying shapes and visible only through a microscope. They are present everywhere. Most bacteria are harmless and even useful to man but a small proportion are harmful (see Tables 2 & 3). Given optimal conditions bacteria can divide into two every 10-30 minutes, and into million or billions within one day. Symptoms of bacterial illness are characteristic-diarrhoea, abdominal pains, with or without vomiting.

slow convalescence over 4-6 months

Escherichiacoli Infection 4-36 1-7 Salmonella Infection 12-36 1-7 Staphylococcus Toxin in food 2-6 Streptococcus Toxin in food 3-12 1-2

Any pathogenic micro-organism including viruses living in or passing through the intestinal tract may be transmissible by untreated water which is polluted by raw or even inadequately treated sewage. In order to cause an illness the water must be grossly polluted. That is why sewage should be well treated before being discharged into or near a water body.

A4 III - DANGERS OF ECONOMIC POISONS

There are nowadays several economic poisons, including pesticides which often cause poisoning and death to man and beast by the pesticides themselves, their raw materials, their containers and effluent etc., being dumped into or near water bodies. The toxicity of a chemical is expressed by means of an LD value, which is a statistical estimate of the dosage necessary to kill 50 per cent of a large population of the test species, under stated conditions (see Table 4).

The organic phosphorus as well as carbonate poisons, act as more or less irreversible inhibitors the enzyme cholinesterase, and thus allow the accumulation of acetylcholine. Organe-chlorine pesticides and several rodenticides are also so deadly poisonous that both manufacturers, traders and users of pesticides should never the allowed to dump any pesticides or under contaminated containers or effluent into or near a water body.

Water Utilization (Control and Regulation) CAP.331 [R.E.1992] 56

A4. IV. - HAZARDS OF IONIZING RADIATIONS

All radiation exposure is harmful, and any unnecessary exposure to or dumping of wastes containing ionizing radiation should be avoided. Ionizing radiation can cause bodily harm (somatic hazards) to the individual who is exposed, or even genetic harm to his offsprings. The pollution of water bodies by radioactive material is an increasingly serious problem, particularly where reactors are in operation; or where radioisotopes are used e.g. treatment of malignancies by Radium or Cobalt in hospitals or in studies of sea pollution by effluent using radioisotope tracers. Nuclear weapon tests too pollute the atmosphere and some environments by their "fall-out". Use of radio-active material and international bodies.
