Law on the Limits of the Sea

Adopted on 10.03.1993

- § 1. In the sense of this law, marine areas are the part of the sea bordering on land, over which Estonian jurisdiction extends.
- § 2. The basis for the division of sea areas is the provisions of the 1958 Geneva Convention on the Territorial Sea and its Lateral Zone and the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea.
- § 3. The starting line of the territorial sea is an imaginary line that, in the case of low water, connects the points farthest from the coast of land, islands, expanses, rocks and individual stones protruding from the water. The coordinates of the baseline of the territorial sea are given in Annex 1.
- § 4. The inland sea is the sea area located between the baseline of the territorial sea and the coast.
- § 5. Territorial sea is a sea area adjacent to the inland sea, the outer limit of which is determined by this law. The coordinates of the boundary of the territorial sea are presented in Annex 2.
- § 6. The width of the territorial sea is 12 nautical miles. Exceptions may be made regarding the width of the territorial sea based on international conventions and agreements with neighboring countries.
- § 7. The economic zone is a sea area located outside the territorial sea and adjacent to the latter, the outer border of which is determined in coordination with neighboring countries. The coordinates of the border of the economic zone are presented in Annex 3.
