Preface

The Fisheries and Aquatic Resources Act No 2 of 1996 was the fisheries legislation limited for the Sri Lankan waters. This provided the legal basis for management, conservation regulation and development of fisheries and aquatic resources of Sri Lanka. This local legislation was strengthened by a series of regulations framed under the same Act. In a background of around 1600 multiday fishing boats engaging in high seas fishery it is very imperative to have local legislation compatible to international standards. However Sri Lanka is a signatory and have ratified a number of international conventions and agreements which pave the way to the legislation of fisheries in high seas, since 1982. It had not been brought them down to the local legislation. Instead it was taken administrative measures to control and manage its high seas fleet.

On the other hand the international community with a view to ensuring the long-term sustainability of fisheries has adopted several international fisheries management agreements based on a new management measure called "Responsible fishing". Under these agreements a number of conservation and management measures have been adopted including measures to combat illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing (IUU fishing) in high seas. Sri Lanka being a Party to these agreements is bound to implement these conservation and management measures. Meanwhile in 2008 EU issued a Regulation (EC Regulation 1005/2008) requiring all countries exporting fishery products to EU to implement the conservation and management measures prescribed under the international agreements, particularly by the Indian Ocean Tuna Commission (IOTC) from January 2010.

Considering the above situation and to fill the legal vacuum and comply with international obligation in high seas fishery an amendment to the Fisheries and Aquatic Resources Act No.2 of 1996 was introduced. Amendment Act No. 35 of 2013 (to incorporate international obligations) was approved by Parliament on November 2013 and 2nd amendment was incorporated to provide for enhanced sanctions (fines) in February 2015. Regulation empowering authority by the Minister under section 61 of the Fisheries Act allows to introduce regulations on following aspects to strength the legal provisions related to "Responsible Fishing"

On the management of;

1. High sea fishing operations
2. Fish catch data collection
3. Fishing Gear Marking
4. Managing Vessel Monitoring and Fisheries Management Centre
5. Regulation on Port State Measures
6. Prohibition on vulnerable shark species

Currently Sri Lanka is fulfilled main legal requirements to a greater degree on “Responsible fishing” at high seas through the legal adoption. However it is an accepted fact that awareness is the key factor for implementing any management tool. Therefore, this publication by the Department of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources is prepared and distributed as a part of the Road Map to Revoke the EU fish Export Ban-2015, focusing on educating the stakeholders on available legal provisions and management measures on High Sea Fishing in Sri Lanka.
